MUSIC SCENE SPRINGS TO LIFE!

Blossoming Talent Hits Streets in Rhythmic Renaissance

Toot, whistle, plunk, and boom! Indeed, those are the swell sounds throughout Buena Vista Street this spring, as Old Man Winter returns to his slumber, parting clouds for new rays of hope and opportunity.

Leading the resurgence is the snazzy, jazzy "Five & Dime," a soulful gaggle of Chicago transplants who arrived in their jalopy just last summer. Having already developed quite a following, they're on the verge of their big break and are eager to perform their latest set for all who visit Buena Vista Street.

Sparkling the rails right along with them are the energetic "Red Car News Boys," an inspirational act of song and dance that'll melt even the iciest of exteriors. Their undeniable talent and positive outlook are the embodiment of Buena Vista Street and are not to be missed for all the carnations on Carthay Circle.

And be sure to keep a keen eye out for Mickey Mouse and Goofy, as they're apt to step into the newfound sunshine and lend their talents to the lively acts. Indeed, it all happens right here on Buena Vista Street, so feel free to stop and smell the roses, fellow dreamers!

"Five & Dime" and "Red Car News Boys" can be found performing on Carthay Circle throughout the day.

"I" on Food with Inglebert Irving

Carthay Circle Restaurant: Aplomb with Mum

When the phone rang at 5:15 last Sunday morning, I knew precisely who it was. Why I decided to answer, however, I simply have no recollection. "Aren't you going to wish me a happy Mother's Day?" she asked. While I groggily reminded her that Mother's Day wasn't until May 12th, dear Mum asserted that she would not be available that day. She then seamlessly rescheduled our annual dining "celebration" for that very evening. Without pause, she chose the Carthay Circle Restaurant, which had pleasantly surprised me in the past, but could find my ire piercing without a seasonal resurrection. Whether or not I could demonstrate restraint with the corresponding inquisition on when I would marry and produce offspring would be another question entirely.

We arrived at the grand establishment at exactly 4:30 p.m., early by even robin and worm standards. But at least it would be over before sunset, and I could still salvage a second night of it, should I choose. As the friendly staff awarded us one of the restaurant's exquisite private dining rooms, my favorite matriarch suggested I do all of the ordering for the evening. Having grown accustomed to her selection of the mac n' cheese with fries and subsequent insistence that I try them, I was thrown off my sardonic game a bit. Could this possibly be a tolerable experience? A seductive luring before the spring of her trap, more than likely. I was, however, quite pleased to discover several adventurous new offerings on the menu, and I would indulge with my selection.

Following a surprisingly cordial discussion on the current state of Hollywood cinema, our meal arrived - a bel accomplishment of Petit Beef Filet Mignon Braised Kobe Beef Cheeks, Fingerling Potatoes, Watercress, and Zinfandel Essence. While I pride myself on not being deceived by appearances, the presentation was quite lovely and deserved to be noted. Mum, on the other hand, was stoic, frightened even perhaps, as she took her first bites. We dined in silence for a few moments, the very way we had throughout my childhood. And then she set her fork down. "Lovely," she exclaimed. I raised a wispy eyebrow, startled that we agreed on something, anything, let alone food. Disregard the fact that the entrée was a perfectly succulent triumph.

Then, without a drizzle of pretense, it happened. Mum leaned forward in her chair, looked me in the eyes, and told me she was proud of me. Proud of all that I had accomplished in my career and proud of who I had grown up to be. To my utter dismay, my eyes welled slightly. A tingling sensation rolled down my spine. My lips parted and, without deliberation, the words, "Happy Mother's Day" spilled out of my soul. Mum just smiled at me for awhile, like I was her small boy again. Perhaps, I was. Then, ever so slowly, she leaned close and asked, "Now, what shall we have for dessert?"

Inglebert also recommends:

- Ariel's Grotto offers Princess Dining for Breakfast and Lunch. For dinner, World of Color Dining packages feature a 3 course prix fixe dinner with reserved viewing at World of Color (characters not a part of the dinner offering.)
- Slow roasted Pork Loin with Coca Cola Barbecue sauce and house-made pies at Flo's V8 Café.
- Five Cheese Ravioli with Pesto at Boardwalk Pizza & Pasta.
- Rustic Bruschetta, roasted artichokes, mushrooms, sun-dried tomatoes, and caramelized onions on a crostini with Tomato Oil and Parmesan paired with your favorite wine at the Alfresco Lounge.

Make reservations at Ariel's Grotto and Carthay Circle Restaurant by stopping by or calling 714-781-DINE.

Oswald's has an Ear for the Road!

Famous for providing travelers with everything they need for the all-American road trip, Oswald's has stumbled upon a nifty new niche. Thanks to the popularity of its long-eared, happy-go-lucky mascot, an entire line of "Oswald the Lucky Rabbit" themed merchandise has redoubled the success of the already swell start-up story.

"Gawrsh, last year we introduced the Oswald Ear Hat," revealed station owner Oswald, "I might be a little long in the tooth, but didn't take me long to reckon we could barely keep it on the shelves. Welp, we're always stocked up now, and we've even expanded the line a might bit."

Indeed they have - plush, T-shirts, glassware, even denim jackets for all who seek them. And don't forget to get Oswald's signature "super speedy service" before you hit the road!

Oswald's is located near the entrance to Disney California Adventure Park at 2600 Buena Vista Street.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Thank you so very much for reading this. I just want to be sure everyone knows that the time for Spring Cleaning has arrived. It is certainly one of the most important times of the year, and one that we could all use a friendly reminder for. I will be polishing my locker down at the Buena Vista Street Messenger Service, which is the place I work. I will also be replenishing my supplies of pencils and messages, so I will be properly prepared for my route during this busy season. I hope everyone enjoys this time as much as I do!

Sincerely,
Molly the Messenger

Dear Editor,

Since I live with my parents who are police officers, my three brothers who are police officers, and my sister who is a bugologist, Spring Cleaning can be quite a precarious proposition at our home. While we all strive to be model citizens, I must confess we often fall short of community codes and will therefore pay the fines. What's worse, several skeeter eaters, of which I am fairly terrified, have entered our home, and my sister prohibits us from removing them.

Officially,
Calvin the Cop

Dear Editor,

As the time for Spring Cleaning is upon us, I would love to announce that my dog Lady has never attracted a flea in her entire existence on this planet. During this challenging season, however, she receives two baths a day, and her sleeping quarters are painstakingly well-inspected for pests. Since I, too, take great pride in my personal grooming habits, I believe we should all refer to this time of year as Spring Grooming, rather than Spring Cleaning.

Lovingly,
Donna the Dog Lady

Egg Hunt at Redwood Creek Challenge Trail!

Calling all budding Wilderness Explorers! You are hereby invited to come out and earn the elusive Egg-fivity Badge! Indeed, do-gooders, over-achievers, and tree-lovers, simply hike on over to Redwood Creek Challenge Trail and join Russell and Dug from Disney-Pixar's "Up" for a unique, adventurous celebration of Easter, featuring the largest eggs known to mankind!

The bees are buzzing, the birds are chirping, and the swanky, globe-trotting professionals of Elias & Co. have just returned to bring you all the latest fashion trends, right here on Buena Vista Street. From pastels and polka dots to boater hats and bows, the lusciously exotic to the perfectly timeless, there's indeed something for everyone. But of course, there's nothing like Elias & Co. to show us all what we need to be the talk of the town this spring.

Want your neighbors to be really green with envy this season? Straight from the Emerald City, pick up a magical, new "Oz The Great and Powerful" designer tee! And if you really want to be the catwalk's meow, add that swanky handbag from Harveys or spring apparel from fashion brands Angie or Blu Pepper.

Say, any grads out there this spring? Keep those eyes peeled for commemorative mortarboard hats and other graduation themed merchandise, as we tip our "Ears to You!" It's the perfect souvenir to help celebrate this swell occasion in life.

And don't forget dear Mom. Indeed, Mother's Day is just around the corner. Treat the lady in your life right with some zippy apparel and accessories from some of today's most popular brands. Maybe even the new lines of nail polish, lip gloss, and eye shadow from the "Beautifully Disney" collection.

So catch a Red Car Trolley on down to Buena Vista Street and experience all the high fashion excitement for yourself. Elias & Co. is located on the east end of the street at 2750 Buena Vista Street.

Light My Way

Travels with Phibbi Francis

Onward and Upward!

Having recently overcome a harrowing case of aviophobia, I felt inspired to spread my wings a bit. In truth, oddly, my feet just didn't hold right on the ground anymore. Whether it be Spring's softening of the hardened Winter soil, or a nudging by my light to exist in an elevated reality, I found myself pining for experiences which would liberate me from the Earth's gravitational strain.

I boarded a sterling jetliner for a thrilling flight above Paradise Bay, I bounced around in an elevator at the Hollywood Tower Hotel, and I found myself spending long periods of time, dining, even sleeping, in trees. While I recognized that my energy was out of balance, I was content with the journey for the time being.

That is, until a young policeman named Calvin awoke me from a slumber in a cozy apartment on Buena Vista Street. The friendly officer informed me that I was in violation of a municipal code of some sort, but he did write me a "good behavior" ticket for keeping my nooting to a minimum. And while I'm fairly confident it was my light that brought him to me, it's possible that his bright flashlight did play a role. Nevertheless, it was precisely the wake-up call I needed to start addressing the issue.

Wandering the majestic landscape of Gondor Plains, I realized that somewhere in my loss of aviophobia, I had lost my former Phibbi. And I needed to reclaim her. At least, part of her.

Then, at that very moment, an adorable little plane with "Missie's Fly Girl Charter Airline" on the side landed on the remote strip ahead. Out stepped an angelic flight crew, performing a travelogue of song and dance for their gathering passengers. It was such an uplifting, nostalgic experience that I wondered for a moment whether I had entered another existence. Perhaps, I had.

And as the plane took off again, I could still hear the lovely singing from inches. Whether they were soaring through the heavens or grounded on the Earth, the crew was filled with the same heightened level of joy. My light had spoken to me. I had always owned an innate ability to embrace all experiences, to adore the happy, the sad, the exhilarating, and the frightening, all as equal, essential parts of me. And I had lost it. Until then.

Annual Earth Day Honorees Announced!

So who are those preeminent planetary pleasers? Those commendable crowns of consciousness? After an extensive examination and comprehensive consideration, the definitive decisions have been declared. Anxiously awaiting on axis and orbits? Well, here goes. This year's resort-wide search has led us to this trio of triumphs.

For their mastery of mulch, their relish for recycling, please clap those claws for Flak and his crawly cohorts at "a bug's land!" Grab a magnifying glass and get an up-close examination of their wonderful work with popsicle sticks and cardboard containers. But please avoid the sun's rays with your glass, it's not a cute combination.

For his totally tubular tips on marine maintenance, flap those fins for Crush the Turtle! Catch a current over to "Turtle Talk" inside Hollywood Land's Animation Building for his amusing and awesome act.

And finally, for his fervor for far-out fuels and organic offerings, rally those radicals for Fillmore the psychedelic van! Pull on in to the groovy "Fillmore's Taste-In" in Cars Land and wet your whistle with his revitalizing refreshments and native nourishments. They're out of this world, man.

Disney Theater Launches Exciting New Acts!

The showstopping Hollywood Land sensation "Disney Junior - Live on Stage!" has revived the of playbill, shining the spotlight on the Disney Junior's network's latest and greatest stars. Indeed, loyal fans, the casts of "Doc McStuffins" and "Sofia the First" have joined the current headlining acts of "Mickey Mouse Clubhouse" and "Jake and the Never Land Pirates" to create an all new show! And young Hollywood Land has taken notice with both standing and crawling emotions.

Of course, just as "Doc" and Sofia are anxious to share their new stories with audiences, their young fans are certain to spin the turnstiles. Be sure to check your guide for showtimes and line up early! But not too early, as the theatre strictly prohibits camping out overnight.
